

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
1 Breaking Bad : Capital as Cancer	9
2 In Time : The First Hollywood Movie of the Occupy Wall Street Era	23
3 The Walking Dead : The Archetype of the Zombie in the Modern Epoch	33
4 Let Me In : The Figure of the Vampire as Kantian Noumenal	43
5 True Detective and Capitalist Development in Its Twilight Phase	58
6 Tupac Shakur: History's Poet	70
7 Vincent van Gogh	81
8 The Song of Achilles : How the Future Transforms the Past	91
9 Barbara Kingsolver's The Lacuna and the Nature of the Historical Novel	98
10 Balzac's Women and the Impossibility of Redemption in Cousin Bette	107
11 The Wife : A Study in Patriarchy	120
12 The Vigilante in Film: The Movement from Death Wish , to Batman , to Taxi Driver	128
13 A Mirror into Our World: The Radical Politics of Game of Thrones	134
14 Harry Potter and the Modern Age	141
15 The Hunger Games Trilogy – Art for the Occupy Era	153
16 The Politics of Deduction: Why Has Sherlock Holmes Proven So Durable?	162

17	Literary Love as Kantian Sublime: Wuthering Heights and The Sea, The Sea	170
18	Brief Loves That Live Forever : The Historical Melancholy of Andreï Makine	181
19	John Williams' Novel Stoner and the Dialectic of the Infinite and Finite	190
20	From Tragedy to Farce: The Comedy of Ricky Gervais as Capitalist Critique	197
	Bibliography	210
	Index	213