

Contents

Introduction	11
1 Reader-Response Criticism	23
1.1 Reading as a Journey	23
1.2 Rosenblatt's Transactional Theory	26
1.3 Frames	30
1.4 Iser's Model of Meaning-Making	36
1.5 The Overdetermination of Literary Texts	50
2 Transaction in Educational Settings	61
2.1 The Ease of Reading	61
2.2 The Teacher of Literature as a Facilitator	74
2.3 Reading in Stages	82
Stage 1: Framing	90
Stage 2: Reading	93
Stage 3: Think-Tank	98
Stage 4: Lockstep	101
Stage 5: Rereading	106
Stage 6: Conclusions	109
Stage 7: Closure	111
2.4 Learner Texts & Activities	115
3 Cognitive (Literary) Studies	123
3.1 The Return of the Reader	123
3.2 Mental Models	127
3.3 Emotions & Empathy	140

3.3.1 The Feeling of What Happens	140
3.3.2 Types of Reading-Related Feelings	144
3.3.3 Transportation	153
3.3.4 Empathy	157
3.4 Embodied Cognition & Enactivism	174
3.5 Conceptual Metaphors & Blending	187
3.5.1 Basic Principles	187
3.5.2 Metaphors	192
3.5.3 Metonymies	200
3.5.4 Blending	203
3.6 Blending & Literary Studies	213
4 Cognitive Approaches to Comics	229
4.1 Synopsis	229
4.2 Definitions	240
4.3 Cartooning	247
4.4 An Art of Tensions	262
4.4.1 Words vs. Images	262
4.4.2 Image vs. Series/Sequence	278
4.4.3 Sequence vs. Page	297
4.4.4 Experience vs. Object	306
4.5 A Cognitive Reading of Craig Thompson's Blankets (Chapter I)	321
5 Autobiographical Comics	337
5.1 The Conceptual Ambiguity of Autobiography	337
5.1.1 A Struggle with Definitions	337
5.1.2 A Brief History of Autographics	351
5.1.3 Autographical Challenges to Autobiographical Genre Theory ...	356
5.2 Life Writing & Blending	368

5.2.1 The Autobiographical Act as Blending	368
5.2.2 Developing Autobiographical Reasoning	379
5.2.3 Autobiographical Memory	386
5.2.4 Photographic Evidence	390
5.3 Authenticity & Emotional Truth	405
5.4 Autobiographical Selves	419
5.5 Embodiment & Enaction	433
5.6 Types of Autobiographical Comics	448
Conclusion	461
List of Illustrations	469
Bibliography	471