

Contents

Introduction: Not Exactly a Cowardly Lot: Gotham’s Villains Marco Favaro and Justin F. Martin	1
Chapter 1: Death, Monk, and Strange: The Precursors to the Supervillain in Detective Comics John Darowski	9
PART I: ARKHAM CITY: THE ASYLUM, THE CITY AND THE ONES WHO RULE THEM	23
Chapter 2: “This Place Isn’t a Prison”: Institutions, Choice, and the Case of Arkham Asylum Anthony Petros Spanakos and Damien K. Picariello	25
Chapter 3: “You Can’t Fight City Hall!”: The Villains Hidden in Gotham’s Government Ian J. Drake and Matthew Lloyd	39
Chapter 4: The Owls Nesting in the Bat’s City: Secrecy, Gotham’s Social Structures, and the Court of Owls James C. Taylor	51
PART II: CONFRONTING BATMAN: OUTSIDERS, DOPPELGÄNGERS AND PARODIES	65
Chapter 5: The Mutants, the Sons of Batman, and the Long Shadow of the Bat Damien K. Picariello	67
Chapter 6: Bane: The Man Who “Doppelgängered” the Bat Jesús Jiménez-Varea	79

Chapter 7: Outcasts and Oppressors: Killer Moth and Killer Croc Jason DeHart	97
PART III: CREATING A VILLAINOUS IDENTITY: FORM, FUNCTION, AND REBOOTS	107
Chapter 8: Flesh, Scars, and Clay: The Role of Pain and Bodies in the Creation of Identity and Meaning Marco Favaro	109
Chapter 9: Controlling the Appearances: Thomas Elliot’s Hush, His Masks, and the Desire to Dominate Perceptions Sean C. Hadley	123
Chapter 10: “My Relationship with Batman Has Never Been What I’d Call ‘Stable’”: Catwoman’s Flirtations with Superheroism and Her Evolving Role as the Monstrous Feline Fatale Carl Wilson	135
Chapter 11: “Kite Man, Hell Yeah!”: Revisionism, Masculinity, and the Role of the D-tier Supervillain Nicholas T. James	149
PART IV: DANGEROUS WOMEN: VICTIMS, VIXENS, AND VILLAINESSES	165
Chapter 12: From Good Girl to Bad Girl to . . . Something In Between: Harley Quinn as a Morally Complex Character Nathan Miczo	167
Chapter 13: “There Is One Thing You Have Never Understood About Me, Batman”: The Liminality of Talia al Ghul Tosha R. Taylor	185
Chapter 14: Militant Earth Mother: Viewing Poison Ivy as an Ecofeminist rather than as an Ecoterrorist Christina M. Knopf	201
Chapter 15: “Hear Me Roar”: Representations of Catwoman’s Trauma in Comic Books and Cinema from 1983–1995 Sean Travers	215
Chapter 16: Arkham’s Sirens: Analyzing the Roles of the Body and the Transcendental Subject in Arkham’s Villainesses and Antiheroines Marco Favaro	229

PART V: WE ARE WHAT WE BELIEVE: ETHICS, THEOLOGY, AND MOTIVATIONS	245
Chapter 17: The Demon's Head and the Ethics of the Anthropocene Daniel Goff	247
Chapter 18: Cold-Hearted: Mr. Freeze and Moral Development Justin F. Martin	259
Chapter 19: The Pleasure of Fear: The Scarecrow as an Extremely Immoral, Vicious and Pro-Passion Character According to Stoicism Francisco Miguel Ortiz	277
Chapter 20: Batman, Defender of the Status Quo?: On Anarchy and Anarky (Guest Villain: The Ventriloquist) Fernando Gabriel Pagnoni Berns and Eduardo Veteri	291
Chapter 21: The Hole in Things: Dr. Hurt as the Embodiment of Evil in Grant Morrison's Batman Run and Beyond Matthew Brake	305
Index	321
About the Contributors	339