

Contents

List of figures	vii
List of tables	x
Acknowledgments	xii

Introduction: seduction of the innocent? Kurimchaek as entertainment, education, harmful media, political propaganda and beyond	1
---	---

PART I

History, media and regime	25
----------------------------------	----

1 A short history of North Korea and kurimchaek	27
2 Post-1998 North Korean graphic novels	62
3 Father, mother and son: one family, one nation, one medium	90

PART II

Seduction of the reader	117
--------------------------------	-----

4 A society in crisis? From The Arduous March to a new deal	119
5 The downfall of a model citizen? Family background as plot tension and policy discord	151
6 Sleepless in the DPRK: graphic negotiations of 'family' in The True Identity of 'Pear Blossom'	192
7 Patriots behind enemy lines: hyperreality and excess in graphic novels about war	220

PART III

Reading for the reader 249

- 8 Reading for the North Korean reader I: media framing of comics consumption in contemporary DPRK 251

- 9 Reading for the North Korean reader II: comics in children's literature and refugee reminiscences 276

Final panel: seduction of the innocent? 301

Index 303